CINCINNATI AND HAMILTON COUNTY, OHIO
POST OFFICE LETTER LISTS, 1794-1814

From newspaper files of The Cincinnati Historical Society and
The Public Library of Cincinnati and Hamilton County

Edited by Marjorie Byrnside Burress

"These lists will help family historians to find elusive and transient ancestors who passed through Cincinnati on their way West. The many hours spent by Mrs. Burress in compiling these lists will shorten the researcher's task to minutes. This is a valuable addition to the published genealogical records of the area."

J. Richard Abell

Foreword

The shortage of public records for the pioneer period in Cincinnati and Hamilton County makes this publication of post office letter lists a helpful tool in historical research.

There were few post offices in those days, addresses were unknown, so letters were mailed to Cincinnati to be picked up there. Residents of outlying settlements regularly called for their mail and that of their neighbors. Every three months the postmaster posted, or published, a list of persons for whom he was holding letters. The information was spread by way of the grapevine.

Countless families came to Cincinnati to live. Many, however, remained but a few years before moving on west to newer lands. Letter lists, found in newspapers, pin point the time many of those individuals resided in the general vicinity. Genealogical tracers may find among the rolls the name of an ancestor, a discovery which could be the only mention of that person on record in Hamilton County.

Hamilton County covered a broad area until 1803, at which time other counties were created from it. Addresses on many letters named specific neighborhoods throughout southwestern Ohio where men were living. Numerous letters were for soldiers at Fort Washington or other military posts in the Northwest Territory.

Mail was transported by foot, on horseback, by stage coach and by boat; it was carried by friends and tradesmen traveling from west to east, from east to west. Weeks passed before a letter, or newspaper, reached its destination.

Even by 1807 Hamilton County had only four official post offices. These were: Cincinnati, North Bend, Round Bottom and Millersville. The latter was probably in the Mercer's Station, or Newtown, area.

The lack of pioneer records makes these post office lists valuable. There is more information in them than that which first meets the eye. Among the thousands of names are names of such prominent men as Aaron Burr, Winthrop Sargent, Zebulon Pike, Israel Ludlow and William H. Harrison.

The records have been copied from newspaper files of The Cincinnati Historical Society and The Public Library of Cincinnati and Hamilton County, Ohio. The names have been edited, alphabetized and arranged in chronological sequence to make them useful. In this format an index is unnecessary. A rough map of pioneer Hamilton County settlements, along with information about early postmasters and mail service, is included. It is hoped that this publication may prove worthwhile.

NOTICE

New Post Office Established
from Western Spy & Hamilton Gazette issue of September 30, 1800

"A new post office has been established from Cincinnati to Frankfort, Kentucky. The route will be from Cincinnati to Campbell County Court House, to Pendleton County Court House, and on to Cynthiana and Georgetown. The mail is to go once in two weeks; all letters for the Indiana Territory, the state of Tennessee, the Natchez and the different post offices in Kentucky which lie west of Lexington will be carried on this above route.

Cincinnati's First Postmasters

Cincinnati's first p.o. was established June 28, 1794 with Abner M. Dunn, deputy p.m. Dunn kept the office at his house at Pearl & Butler Streets. He died July 18, 1795 and was buried near the site of Fort Washington.

William Maxwell, editor of the Centinel of the Northwest Territory, became p.m. October, 1795. The newspaper office was located at Front & Sycamore Streets.

Daniel Mayo served in the office for a short period during 1796-97; he then moved to Newport, Ky. where he became postmaster.

Major William Ruffin was appointed p.m. July, 1797 and served for about 17 years. His red two-story frame house stood at Columbia & Lawrence Streets. There Ruffin fixed up a booth with glass doors in the corner of a room where he dispensed the mail.

William Burke took over the position in June, 1814. He moved the office "to Main Street, 2 doors above Mr. Thompson's store, at the corner of Main & Columbia." Burke was postmaster until 1841.

Stamps and Envelopes

Postage stamps were first used in the United States in 1847. Before that time postmasters wrote "paid" on folded, wax-sealed, letter sheets.

Envelopes were not generally used until about the mid 1860s. Until then people folded a letter sheet, both ways, sealed it with wax and wrote the address on the outside.

Letters not claimed over a period of several months were sent to the General Post Office as dead letters.

Early Mail Service

Abner M. Dunn became the town's first postmaster when an office was established June 28, 1794, with a post route running between Pittsburgh and Cincinnati.

To the pioneers post days were red letter days. Post carriers, in addition to bringing the mail, brought news and gossip which they had gathered along their route. If the mail arrived on a Monday, the post boy would remain in the town until the next day, giving everyone time to read and answer their letters.

Dunn's son-in-law, William Olin, is said to have been the first post rider out of Cincinnati. Every two weeks he carried mail in saddlebags to Lebanon and Franklin, and from there brought letters back to Cincinnati.

Postage was six cents on letters travelling 30 miles or less and ran as high as 25 cents for 450 miles or over. Letters were sent C. O. D. and many persons who lacked money ran up bills with the postmaster. Dunn got in trouble with the government for not collecting.

Abner Dunn placed an ad in the Centinel of the North-west Territory, April 2, 1795:

Postmaster's Notice

The Postmaster at Cincinnati takes this method of informing those who calculate on receiving letters or papers at the office in the future must come prepared with ready change, cash in hand, or no letters or papers.

A. M. Dunn, PM

Judge John Cleves Symmes, founder of the Miami Purchase, in writing to his grandsons in January, 1804, cautioned them to "always seal the sheet you write on, for if you put a wrapper on it it comes to double postage, one sheet a yard square pays but 12½ cents, but two pieces of paper no bigger than your hands pays 25 cents..."

Cincinnati to Springfield

Beginning in 1804 James R. Wallace, a lad of fourteen, carried mail once a week between Cincinnati and Springfield. Settlers in the upper Mad River valley had private messengers to pick up their mail in Springfield, or later Urbana.

During Postmaster-General Gideon Granger's term (1801-1809), a post route was proposed from Cincinnati to Detroit.

Notes

Few Cincinnati newspapers exist for the 1809-1810 era; thus no post office letter lists are available for this period.

Several letter lists for Lawrenceburgh, in Indiana Territory, and Hamilton, in Butler County, have been included in these records. Lawrenceburg was spelled with an "h" until late 1800s.
